 Arthur Lundahl called with reference to H. R. 9781 dealing with geodesy to the U. S. Coast Guard and Geodetic Survey suggesting that Dr. Seville would be interested in this bill and asked would we procure him a copy. We will also check on the status of this bill.

2. [redacted] I delivered to Searwine [redacted]

[redacted] Searwine's first reaction was he had seen this same report but without the classification. On further examination, however, he found that while the classified report started the same as the other one, he received, it contained considerable additional information.

[redacted] I met briefly with Marjorie Carpenter, Personal Secretary to Senator Thomas J. Dodd, to determine whether the Senator might be able to meet with the Director in Langley next Tuesday, 3 April. Miss Carpenter said that Senator Dodd was most reluctant to leave the immediate area of Capitol Hill since he once missed a roll call vote because of such an absence. Miss Carpenter asked if Mr. McCone came up to the hill very often. I mentioned that he would be up before the Senate Space Committee tomorrow in connection with confirmation hearings for General Carter but it developed that Senator Dodd was involved in a committee hearing in the morning. It was agreed that we would check further for a possibility of either having Mr. McCone visit Senator Dodd on the hill or have the Senator meet with him at South building.

[redacted] At his request, I visited Representative Albert Quis who turned over to me another letter which he had received from his correspondent in the Soviet Union. The letter consisted of three pages approximately 18" x 24", handwritten on both sides. Quis asked that our people look at the letter and give him advice and guidance as to how he should respond. This student correspondent requested a number of things including a copy of Pasternak's book, Dr. Zhivago. In the course of a very friendly conversation, I mentioned to Quis that he might like to visit us in the new building to learn a little something of the Agency and to talk directly with some of the SR people who were reviewing his correspondence. Quis appeared most pleased by the invitation and suggested the possibility of his coming out on Friday, 13 April. I told him I would check on this date and be in touch with him again. In any event, we will be back in touch with him concerning the student's letter.
